*Alguien me acarició la espalda,
me desperté antes de que pudiera mirarle a los ojos.*

Framed in our Boiler Room space, we are presenting work by Virginia Paradise, the youngest proposal in our current programme, an artist who returns to the gallery after having exhibited in our Open Call in 2017.

Largely grounded in ceramics, Paradise's work follows a line of research in which she confronts the expression of the unconscious with the creative act. In fact, it is in the ductility of ceramic where she finds the means of giving shape to the symbolic elements that appear in her dreams.

In the exercise of trying to recall the fragments of fiction and reality that are blurred by night, the artist constructs a series of archetypes, redolent of universal patterns and images that somehow form part of the collective unconscious.
